Pierre Poilievre and the Common Sense Conservatives

Dear Friends,

Justin Trudeau's resignation has changed nothing. His latest maneuver, proroguing Parliament to avoid accountability, is an unacceptable affront to Canadian democracy. In early January, the Public Accounts Committee was poised to begin discussing a non-confidence motion, setting the stage for a vote at the end of the month. But instead of facing the music, Trudeau chose to shut down Parliament, delaying the critical work Canadians expect from their elected officials. Canadians deserve better, and they deserve it now.

This action by Trudeau is a clear admission that he and his Liberal government no longer have the confidence of the House of Commons. Major opposition parties had committed to holding Trudeau accountable, promising to bring his government down at the earliest opportunity. Rather than allow a carbon tax election to happen, Trudeau quit and delayed the business of government until March 24. This is not leadership—it's cowardice.

The bedrock of our democracy is the principle of responsible government. The Prime Minister must maintain the confidence of the House. If Justin Trudeau cannot do so, then we must have an election. Let's be clear: the Liberal Party is not Canada's government. This country deserves competent leadership that can command confidence and deliver results for Canadians.

Even worse, Trudeau's prorogation comes at a time of critical importance for our economy and international relations. Just 14 days before the inauguration of a new U.S. president promising devastating tariffs on Canadian goods, Trudeau has chosen to leave Canada leaderless. Canadians deserve a government with a strong mandate to negotiate with our largest trading partner, not a government that prioritizes its survival over the national interest.

This crisis in leadership will not be solved by a Liberal successor. Whether it's Chrystia Freeland or "Carbon Tax Carney," their failed woke policies remain unchanged. From the costly and ineffective carbon tax to hard drug legalization, the Liberal agenda has been disastrous for Canada. Canadians know that the same players will deliver the same broken results.

As Liberals take a break for the next two-and-a-half months, Conservatives will continue to hold this government accountable. We will ensure the NDP and Bloc Québécois keep their word, and join us in voting for a carbon tax election as soon as possible. This isn't just about bringing down a failing government—it's about giving Canadians a choice and a chance to turn this country around.

The Common-Sense Conservatives have a plan to restore Canada's promise. We will axe the tax to make life more affordable for families. We will build the homes needed to reignite the dream of homeownership for Canadians. We will fix the budget to end inflationary pressures and runaway government spending. And we will stop the crime that has made so many Canadians feel unsafe in their own communities.

It's time to bring common sense back to Ottawa.
It's time to bring leadership back to Parliament.
And it's time to bring it home—for all Canadians.

Let's Bring It Home,

Brad Redekopp

Get to know "Carbon Tax Carney"

Mark "Carbon-Tax" Carney is the former Governor of the Bank of Canada and the Bank of England, and he has come back to Canada as Justin Trudeau's key economic advisor. Known for advocating carbon taxes and woke economic policies, he is a star figure in NDP-Liberal political circles.

Despite now pretending to be an outsider, "Carbon Tax Carney" has consistently supported Justin Trudeau's disastrous policies, doubling Canada's debt, housing costs, gun crime, and food bank reliance.

Carney has championed Trudeau's agenda at every turn. He endorsed the punishing carbon tax in his book, ignoring the pain it causes for millions of Canadian households. Handpicked by Trudeau to chair the so-called "Leader's Task Force on Economic Growth," Carney helped advance the same costly, ineffective policies Canadians continue to suffer under today. He is no different than Justin Trudeau—same team, same failed ideas.

Canadians need a carbon tax election now. They deserve the chance to choose between the NDP-Liberal coalition, which taxes food, punishes work, doubles housing costs, and fuels crime and drugs; or the Common-Sense Conservatives, who will axe the tax, build the homes, fix the budget, and stop the crime. It's time for change—let's bring it home.
